Hi Boss,

Yes, I would say I was incompletely quoted -- During our conversation, Chris asked me how I felt about being reassigned, and I told him I had mixed feelings -- that part of me had wanted to see this through to the end, and part of me felt some relief at the ability to move onto other things. This is the same thing I've told everyone, but it didn't come out that way in the paper.

I hope that Chris is mis-quoting you or leaving something out...because this is not exactly what you have relayed to me. My recall is that you were pretty OK with the move and you were not characterizing it differently to others. If you have been--please let me know. I would never have allowed this to happen if you had a really strong desire to stay on the project. All indications were that you were indifferent.

This guy is not doing you a service, if this is an innacurate characterization.
